I'd like to express my sincere concern about the negative societal, ecological and environmental impact of allowing this pipeline project to commence. I've personally done hours of research and listened to opinions on both sides of the issue and it's very clear that the negative impact to our communities, landscape, wildlife, water supply and overall environmental health in South Dakota could in no way be justified by the limited economic impact to the state. The situation in North Dakota should be a glaring example of negative impact on the environment, communities and people vs. the positive economic impact for a select few. There is not one concrete measurable way this pipeline will benefit the general public of the state of South Dakota. The people's best interest should always come before the financial gain of a few.

Thank you,

Kara Schweitzer
